

2024 B2B Marketing Benchmark

The B2B Marketing Organization of Tomorrow

The skills, practices and tools future-looking
B2B organizations need to innovate and drive growth

To Understand the Evolving Landscape and Opportunity in B2B, We Surveyed B2B Marketing Leaders in Eight Countries.

These countries represent core B2B growth markets with a vibrant LinkedIn member base.

Our Perspective Is Backed by Data From Ipsos and LinkedIn

Primary quantitative research was conducted by Ipsos via a device-agnostic online survey, designed with each market in mind. LinkedIn internal data provided critical context and understanding to Ipsos' quantitative findings.

Research Methodology

Ipsos recruited a sample of 2,001 B2B leaders from various industries utilizing expert network sample providers.

Participants took a 15-minute device-agnostic survey on mobile or desktop.

Survey development drew from existing Ipsos expertise as well as findings from LinkedIn research. The focus of the survey was challenges being faced by senior-level B2B marketers globally. The large sample size allows for confident projection of results and analysis of subgroups of the target audience.

LinkedIn also did an analysis of 1,000 B2B brands to understand how B2B companies are faring in this environment. We used our B2B Index, a new LinkedIn metric that measures effective brand building, to identify the 1,000 B2B companies we could analyze in aggregate to determine B2B trends on LinkedIn.

Data Collection Timeline

Blending Old and New Tactics and Techniques Will Help Today's Marketers Build the More-Nimble Team of Tomorrow

The B2B marketing team of the future is likely to be more agile, data-driven and customer-centric than ever before.

Teams will still need a strong foundation of traditional marketing skills, but they will also need to be proficient in newer, more specialized capabilities to thrive in a rapidly changing environment. The B2B marketer of the future must be a versatile and multidisciplinary professional who can blend established marketing principles with cutting-edge technologies to drive results.

So how does the marketer of today compare to the marketer of tomorrow?

LinkedIn has partnered with Ipsos, tapping about 2,000 marketing leaders across eight different global markets for their thoughts, to determine how marketers are currently optimizing toward this future.

Today's marketing leaders are confident in their own and their teams' ability but are still looking to boost agility and adaptability on their teams. They are building relationships across the organization to align marketing efforts with overall organizational goals. They are leveraging technology to become more efficient, more creative and more innovative. They are establishing the strong measurement frameworks they need to both prove their worth in the C-Suite and make their work more resonant with customers.

Above all, our report found they realize that leaning into people skills is important.

Being a number cruncher is no longer enough – brands are seeking curious, resourceful and collaborative marketers. As technology like GAI continues to transform marketing organizations, relying on human skills will be even more critical. Our report shows that marketers are well on their way to balancing the skills that are needed to lead our organizations into the future.

Improving communications skills to foster relationships and show marketing impact

Building and maintaining strong relationships is foundational to driving business growth, securing client loyalty, fostering innovation and gaining a competitive edge in a complex and evolving market landscape. The ability to communicate effectively and solve problems will be key to marketers' success in the years ahead.

Visionary CMOs

The CMO serves as a visionary leader, strategist and advocate for customer-centricity and innovation within the B2B marketing organization of the future. DEI efforts are not just about fulfilling a moral or ethical obligation – they are strategic imperatives that can drive competitive advantage, foster innovation and enhance brand perception. By creating more inclusive and equitable environments, organizations can unlock the full potential of their workforce, better serve diverse markets and build stronger, more loyal customer relationships.

Establishing comprehensive DEI measures

B2B marketers should establish comprehensive DEI measures that address the needs of all marginalized groups. While progress has been made in increasing the representation of white women, a truly inclusive and equitable environment requires a multifaceted approach that benefits everyone.

OPPORTUNITY AREA: Practice what you preach when it comes to hiring

Though B2B marketers report they value diversity and being inclusive, marketing leaders don't prioritize these values when it comes to hiring new team members. Our data shows that just 7% of leaders prioritize seeking candidates from underrepresented and marginalized groups when hiring.

A group of people are seated around a white table in a meeting room. In the center, a woman with long blonde hair, wearing a red blazer, is smiling and looking towards a man on her right. The man has a beard and is wearing a blue and white plaid shirt. They are both looking at their laptops. On the table, there are two laptops, an orange mug, and several cameras. The background is a brick wall. A white text box is overlaid on the left side of the image.

Now let's dig deeper into our ideal B2B marketing team of the future and what B2B marketers are doing right now to optimize their teams toward that future.

B2B Marketing Leaders of the Future Must Be Strategic Thinkers With Strong Business Acumen

Today's marketing leaders are confident in their own and their teams' ability, but they are still looking to boost agility and adaptability on their teams. Who will the future bring?

Meet Our Strategic Thinker

They are a seasoned B2B marketer with a wealth of experience and a strategic mindset that sets them apart. Here are some specific qualities that define them:

ANALYTICAL PROWESS

They excel at identifying patterns, trends and opportunities that inform strategic decision-making and drive business growth.

INDUSTRY EXPERTISE

Their deep understanding of the industry landscape, market dynamics and competitive forces enable them to anticipate changes and stay ahead of the curve.

STRATEGIC PLANNING

Their marketing strategies are aligned with the organization's overall goals and objectives, ensuring that every initiative contributes to long-term success.

FINANCIAL ACUMEN

They strive to maximize ROI and collaborates closely with finance and accounting to ensure resources are properly allocated.

ADAPTABILITY AND AGILITY

They are not afraid to pivot when necessary, responding quickly to changes in market conditions or customer preferences to maintain a competitive edge.

VISION AND INNOVATION

Above all, they challenge the status quo, push boundaries and inspire others to think creatively.

What are B2B marketers doing today to become more like our strategic thinker?

We'll explore next what they are spending their money on, and how marketing organizations worldwide are planning for their futures, as well as highlighting their priorities and challenges.

Today's Leaders Are Optimistic About Future Budget Hikes

Despite the hardships of 2023, senior marketers predicted last year that their budgets would grow. Their bullishness was on target as 68% of respondents reported that their budget did indeed increase compared to last year, with just under 1 in 5 saying their budget has risen 25% or more.

Looking ahead, 72% of respondents said they expect their budgets to increase in the future, highlighting continued opportunities for marketing teams.

INSIGHT

CMOs and other marketing C-Suite are more likely than Directors/Managers to say their current budget has increased.

Financial service sector more likely to report budget increases while Tech sector more likely to report budget decreases.
